Architect and urban designer Pablo Güiraldes has worked, taught and lectured both in Argentina and the U.S. His built work includes single-family and multi-family residential architecture, mixed-use developments and master-planned communities. He has also worked in remote locations in Argentina, designing interpretation centers and natural reserves.

Pablo Güiraldes has been working in the public sector since 2015, first as National Director for

Urban Development with Argentina's National Secretary of Housing and, since May 2018, as General Director of Urban Regeneration with the City of Buenos Aires, where he oversees the historic preservation of heritage sites and buildings in many of the city's neighborhoods.

His lecture explores the lessons learned and common aspects of his practice, teaching and writing.
