

Supported by the UMD Heritage Lectures and the School of Architecture, Planning and Preservation

Triumphs and Challenges: How the National Parks System Is Reshaping Preservation to Include All America

For more details, please visit:
www.go.umd.edu/national_parks

The reception and lecture are open to the public.

We encourage all UMD students, faculty, staff and alumni to attend the workshop.

Please RSVP here by February 3rd

February 5 RECEPTION: 5-6 PM LECTURE: 6-7 PM
 Auditorium (0204) Architecture Building

Dr. Robert G. Stanton

Former Director, National Park Service

Expert Member of the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation

Please join the Historic Preservation Program for the Marvin Breckinridge Patterson lecture, reception and workshop featuring Dr. Robert G. Stanton, former director of the National Park Service (NPS). As NPS' first African American director, Dr. Stanton has taken particular interest in increasing the diversity of the service's staff and public programs to better serve minority populations. Dr. Stanton will touch upon the challenges and responsibilities of the NPS to provide opportunities for ALL America—particularly our youth and diverse audiences, to connect with our nation's rich and diverse natural and cultural heritage.

February 6 WORKSHOP: 12-1:30 PM
 Dean's Conference Room, Architecture Building (Suite 1200)

This workshop will describe the criteria to add resources to the African American Civil Rights Network (AACRN) and demonstrate the application process. Lunch will be provided.